

Constant Leung
Professor
King's College London
UK

Dr Constant Leung is Professor of Educational Linguistics in the Dept of Education and Professional Studies, King's College London. He is a Fellow of the Academy of Social Sciences (UK). Before taking up teaching positions in higher education he taught in schools and worked as advisory teacher and manager in local government. He was the founding Chair of the National Association for Language Development in the Curriculum (UK). His research interests include education in ethnically and linguistically diverse societies, additional/second language curriculum and assessment, language policy and teacher professional development. He serves as Editor of Research Issues of TESOL Quarterly, Senior Associate Editor of Language Assessment Quarterly, and as a member of the Editorial Boards of Assessment in Education, Journal of Language, Identity and Education and the Modern Language Journal.

Assessment and Learning – Making Theory Work in Practice in English Language Education